Is Mold a Killer?

It Can Be a Serious Health Risk for Some People and a Huge House Risk For All

Mold in your home is certainly an annoyance, but it can also be a serious health hazard for certain individuals and cause substantial damage to your residence. More bad news: Your homeowners' policy may not provide coverage for damage to your house caused by mold, which has been found in residences in all 50 states. Mold can grow in areas of a home that are constantly wet, whether it's a result of leaking roofs or plumbing, or overflowing washing machines or showers/baths.

There have been a few cases in which the presence of toxic molds in homes has reportedly caused people to cough up blood or lose their memories. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), "These case reports are rare, and a causal link between the presence of the toxic mold and these conditions has not been proven." There have, however, been high-profile cases in New York, Texas, Ohio and California where toxic molds are alleged to have caused serious injuries or even death. The CDC does warn that individuals with chronic breathing difficulties such as asthma or immune disorders are at increased risk for health problems related to mold.

Structural Damage Could Be Severe

While the health risks associated with exposure to mold are not definitive at this time, there's no doubt about the structural damage mold can cause. Mold around wood can lead to dry rot, which can have a domino effect on wooden areas of a home, spreading throughout the wood fiber and weakening the structural integrity of your home.

The Insurance Information Institute has compiled a list of symptoms of mold damage:

1. There are sunken areas in baseboards or trim, or baseboards are separated from the floor.
2. There are whitish areas under carpet or linoleum, or behind furniture.
3. There are mushroom like growths or "fruit bodies" — flat, as much as half an inch thick, and a pale olive gray, brown or black — that are present on the underside of flooring or cabinets.
4. Plaster or sheetrock is swelling or crumbling.
5. There are vine like branches from the soil to the foundation, framing or the underside of flooring. The branches are typically white, brown or black.

If mold is found in your home, you should clean as soon as possible and try to eliminate its source by fixing whatever problem is causing an area to be constantly wet. When you clean the mold, make sure you are not experiencing any symptoms of allergies.

Wear a mask and rubber gloves. Concoct a solution of water and bleach (a 10 to 1 ratio), as well as soap to cut any dirt and oil. Make sure the area is well ventilated by opening as many windows as possible.

You can also take several steps to make your home as mold-free as possible.

1. Keep areas of the house where moisture is present well ventilated.
2. If necessary, use air conditioning and dehumidifiers.
3. Fix plumbing leaks as soon as possible.
4. Make sure there's adequate insulation for windows, pipes, exterior walls, the roof and floors.
5. Don't install carpeting over areas that are constantly damp or wet, such as bathrooms or concrete floors with leaks or frequent condensation.

News and Tips to Make Your Life Easier, Safer, and Happier...

Teen Driver Corner:

Have you ever discussed with your Teen Driver the consequences of their actions while driving your car? What happens if your teen gets a ticket or is involved in an accident. Are there any consequences? What are the consequences?

Spencer Insurance suggests you sit down with your teen driver and list the rules by completing a Teenager-Parent Driving Contract. You should also list the consequences when a rule is broken. It is best for the teen to know in advance the consequences of their actions. Are they responsible for the deductible when they have an accident and are they responsible for the increased cost of insurance due to a ticket or accident. Let them know that they will be held accountable for their driving behavior.

Call us today for our Free "Teenager-Parent Driving Contract" and "Family Driving rules and Consequences form." Use these documents as guides in setting up the rules for your teen driver. Remember that you lead by example, so if you tell your teen not to use a cell phone while driving, make sure you are not using your cell phone when you are driving. For more information on how to protect your Teen Driver visit our website dedicated to Teen Driver Safety at www.teendriversinsurance.com/spencer.

Tip of the Month

Take the "20 Question Quiz"

By Charles J. Spencer CLU

Inside this month's newsletter is an insert titled "The 20 Question Quiz" that could protect you and your family from unexpected financial disaster. I urge you to complete this short quiz and send it back to us for review.

Many insurance experts estimate that 2 out of 3 homes are underinsured by at least 25%. This could happen to our clients too if you did not call us when you added an addition or altered your home. Don't be fooled by the current housing market into thinking you can replace your home for less today than you could a few years ago. Market value and replacement value can be far apart. Call us if you think your home is under or over insured.

Our agency prides itself on consulting with our clients to make sure they have the proper coverage. We understand that price is important, but we don't want you to be caught short if you have a loss. Saving a little in premium now can cost you dearly when you have a claim. Make sure you understand what coverage you are losing when you save premium.

Our experienced and licensed staff at Spencer Insurance Agency understands that the economy is struggling and many of our clients are looking for any way to save money.

One of our clients recently called me to tell me they received a quote from another agent for their homeowner's policy and was able to save over $500. The agent told our client it was the same coverage as they have now. Fortunately, the client emailed us a copy of the quote and we found that although the amount of insurance on the house was the same the new policy was dangerously inadequate.

Our client had a finished basement containing a great deal of furniture and electronics and the basement was not covered for sump pump failure or backup of sewer and drains. The $500 savings could have cost our client over $30,000 in uncovered losses. The client spoke to the other agent and the agent verified they did not have the same coverage.

Don't let this happen to you! Please make sure you call our office for a second opinion after you get a competitor's quote. Call us before you make the switch. Your situation may have changed and we may be able to offer you a lower premium on your policy. Fax or email us a copy of any quote you receive before you make the change. We will honestly evaluate the quote and compare it to your present coverage to make sure you are not losing valuable protection.

Fill out "The 20 Question Quiz" and return it to our office today. We want to make sure you have the proper protection. Your Protection and Peace of Mind is our only Business!!
